

On January 26th I received a recorded message from a telemarketer. I tried hanging up several times but couldn't. Finally someone came on the phone and told me I had won something or other which I didn't hear because I was telling her I was on the no call list and she didn't have a right to be calling me. She told me that if I quit yelling she could help me and then I asked for her badge number. Instead she put me through to a male. I asked him why they called me and he said because we had bought from them in the last 18 months. I asked him what his companies name was and where they were from and what I could have possibly bought from them in the last 18 months. He said they were Instant Promotions out of Orlando, FL. I again asked what I bought and he said they represented SEVERAL companies and I may have bought something from one of them. He told me he would put my telephone number on the no call list immediately. I told him it was already on the no call list. I gave him my number. I never did get a badge number out of anyone.
